We all know that the practical knowledge and skills of growing healthy food are an absolute necessity, more so today than at any other time in history. But while the spiritual understanding of what lies behind Biodynamic methods and nature's growth forces does not carry the same urgency or necessity, it is what makes the world and our lives meaningful and can strengthen our resolve.

Rudolf Steiner's spiritual research has given us practical solutions in many fields, including education, agriculture, medicine, the arts, architecture etc., all of which arose out of his personal experience of stepping across the threshold into the spiritual world and reporting back what he found there. His insights were those of an esoterically schooled spiritual master, which is very different from the many New Age channellers, psychics and hypnotic regression practitioners etc. that abound on the internet and on YouTube these days. As far as I can tell - and I have been looking for a long time - there simply is no other spiritual research in modern times that is able to delve as deeply and comprehensively into the mysteries of nature, humanity and the spiritual universe.

Steiner's teachings help us understand that we all, humans, animals, plants and minerals alike are evolving together within a meaningful and inter-connected spiritual reality. But we must also own the fact that as spiritually evolving beings, the future development, not just of humanity, but also that of nature, with all her creatures, rests with the free will which the spiritual universe has given us. This is both a sobering and at the same time also an immensely empowering realization.

Johannes Schuster was the founding Class Teacher of the Little Yarra Steiner School in outer Melbourne in 1987. As subsequent administrator and building designer during the first 20 years of Little Yarra's establishment phase, he was instrumental in the school's growth from K- Year 12 and the creation of an inspiring environment of purpose designed buildings, on a beautiful 60 acre property in the Yarra Valley.

With over 45 years background in Anthroposophy, it was Johannes' particular interest in the Four Ethers which led to his involvement with architecture, resulting in the creation of an Anthroposophically based theory and methodology of Transformative Art & Architecture (TAA), which he and his wife Sue have been teaching in Australia, Switzerland (Goetheanum 2015 and 2016), Argentina, Malaysia and China, for the last 14 years, online since 2020. Because of its wide ranging spiritual scope, the TAA course has attracted the interest not only of architects, designers and artists, but also that of Waldorf teachers, therapists, farmers, business owners and entrepreneurs. More recently, Johannes began offering general Anthroposophical lecture cycle on the spiritual history of humanity, Earth and the Structure of the Spiritual Universe.
